Parsing from a boundary consumes one arbitrary symbol, then either a or exactly bb, and returns to the boundary, proving equivalence. The empty suffix separates R from all others; suffix a separates S from T, X; suffix b separates T from X. Hence all four states are pairwise distinguishable and minimal.