Comparative cost and preferred method

The Newton or first-order optimization uses at most $r \leq N$ coefficients, replacing a p-parameter system. Eigensystem construction costs $O(N^3)$ densely; each Newton Hessian depends on iteration-specific logistic weights. This does not supply the exact one-factorization leave-one-out identity available for squared loss.